OPERATIONS GUIDE · 2027 SEASON

Package Relations.

How General Tour and its linked packages share one seat pool — without ever double-booking a departure.

01 · THE CONCEPT

What Is a Package Relation?

General Tour is the main version of the trip. Deluxe Tour, Lower Antelope Canyon, Premier Antelope Canyon & Bend Adventure, and Affiliates are different ways of selling that same trip — a different price point, a different sales channel, a different set of extras. Even though guests book through five separate listings, they board the same vehicle, at the same time, with the same limited number of seats.

A package relation links these five listings into one family, with General Tour as the parent and the other four as its children. From that point on, every seat booked through any of the five is drawn from one shared total — not five independent ones.

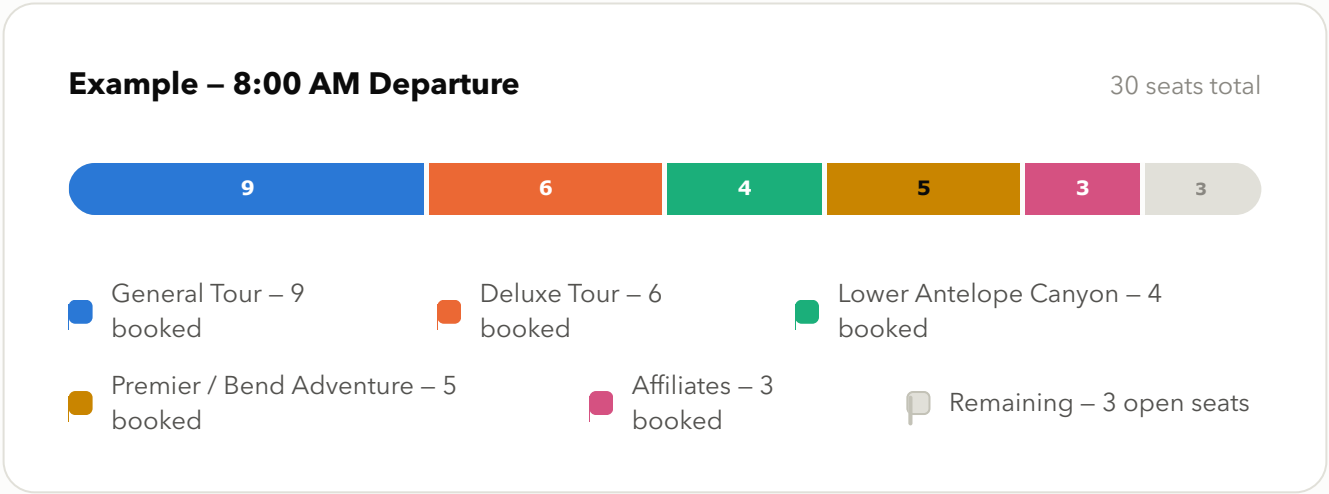

One physical departure. Five ways to book it. One seat count.

02 · WHY IT MATTERS

Shared Capacity, Not Five Separate Counts

Without a relation, each of the five packages tracks its own bookings independently. If the vehicle for a departure holds 30 guests, and each listing is able to sell up to 30 seats on its own, that single departure could be sold several times over before anyone notices — guests would arrive to find there's no room left.

Linking the packages closes that gap. Every booking, through any of the five listings, draws down the same shared total for that departure time.

27 seats booked across five different listings, 3 seats still open — and every one of the five packages sees the same, correct, up-to-the-minute number.

03 · PREPARATION

Get Each Package Ready First

Every one of the five packages needs to exist on its own, fully set up, before any of them are linked together. Linking does not create or copy anything — it only tells the system to share seat counts between packages that already exist.

1. Its own listing details
   Name, description, and photos — exactly as it should appear to guests booking that specific version of the trip.

2. Its own price
   The rate for that version of the trip. Prices are never shared between linked packages — only the seat count is.

3. Its own dates and time slots
   Every package must already have its own slots created for the 2027 season before you attempt to link it to another package.

Nothing is shared automatically
Descriptions, photos, and pricing stay independent for every package in the family. The relation only shares the seat count for a matching departure.

STAYS INDEPENDENT PER PACKAGE

SHARED ACROSS THE FAMILY

Seat count for the matching departure

That's it — one number, kept in sync across all five listings.

04 · THE ONE RULE

Departure Times Must Match – Exactly

For the shared seat count to work, every package in the group must use the identical departure time for that slot. A difference of even a few minutes is enough to break the link – the packages will simply stop sharing seats, silently, with no error shown.

Correct – all five set to 8:00 AM

Incorrect – one package set to 8:05 AM

If General Tour runs more than once a day – say 8:00 AM and 1:00 PM – each departure time needs its own separate group of linked packages.

GROUP A

8:00 AM departure

All five packages linked together

GROUP B

1:00 PM departure

Its own, separate linked group

Two departure times, two independent families – sharing a package name doesn't share a seat count.

05 · SETUP

Setting Up the Link — Four Steps

1. Create all five packages
   General Tour, Deluxe Tour, Lower Antelope Canyon, Premier Antelope Canyon & Bend Adventure, and Affiliates — each fully set up with its own details, pricing, and 2027 time slots.

2. Confirm the departure times match
   Check every package in the group against the same shared departure — exactly, down to the minute.

3. Open General Tour and add the other four
   Use the package relation option to add Deluxe Tour, Lower Antelope Canyon, Premier Antelope Canyon & Bend Adventure, and Affiliates as linked packages, for the 2027 season.

4. Mark the parent and children
   General Tour is marked as the parent; the other four are marked as children in that same group.

ONCE LINKED, THIS IS THE FAMILY

Important Notes

This is set up per season

Linking these packages for 2027 does not carry over to 2028 or any other year. The same setup will need to be repeated for each future season.

The option may need to be switched on

If a package doesn't show any option to link relations at all, this feature may not be turned on for your account yet. Let your development team know and they'll check it.

Allow time for changes to take effect

After adding or changing a link, shared seat counts can take up to an hour to fully update everywhere. If it doesn't look right immediately, check back a bit later before assuming something's wrong.

Always use the official package relation option

Don't try to recreate this by any other means. The package relation option is the only place that checks for mistakes — like accidentally linking one package under two different parents.

Questions? Send a screenshot of what you're seeing to your development team, and we'll walk through it together.
